Oil Well Prospects Good.

A. A. Snell, manager of the Bryan Gas and Oil Co., gave a barbecue to a number of his friends yesterday and made a test on the gas supply from the old well located below College, which was very encouraging. It shows a sufficient quantity of gas to be used as fuel in the construction of the new well. The experience with the old well has caused the management to meet every requirement for surmounting the difficulties encountered in the old well with the water when they struck the oil strata.

Those who took part in the barbecue and witnessed the test are very enthusiastic in their praise of the royal manner in which they were entertained, and feel deeply gratified at the test made, as they feel that the gas supply and other requirements are such as to guarantee success.
